

Mediate your Life!

English-language year-long Mediation Immersion Program Based on Nonviolent Communication (NVC)

Do conflicts in your personal or professional life demand more energy than you enjoy? Do you seem to get involved in more conflicts than you would like and are you looking for a way to change this? Or are you a professional mediator interested in additional tools to contribute to connecting conflict parties? Maybe you also frequently communicate in English in your private or work life and/or would like to improve your English skills? If you've answered "yes" to any of these questions, our year-long training program is right for you. Everyone who wants to learn to apply NVC Mediation skills at work, at home, during travel, with a partner, children, neighbors, friends or colleagues is invited to participate.

NVC Mediation stands for mediation based on Nonviolent Communication developed by Marshall Rosenberg, John Kinyon and Ike Lasater. In this year-long immersion program, you'll learn to resolve your own internal and interpersonal conflicts and to informally or professionally help others to find solutions to their conflicts.

This program consists of 3 modules of 5-day-long training retreats, with monthly supervision calls in between and weekly (phone or in-person) practice sessions with fellow students. After the first retreat you're welcome to decide if you'd like to register for the other retreats.
